RED FOX RUN

VALERIE CAVENEY

Executive judgment. Hands-on delivery.

Leaders bring me in when important work needs someone they trust to run with it.

Formerly Chief of Staff and VP, Marketing & Communications, First Republic Bank. Representative clients: a global growth-equity firm, a family office, a publicly traded bank, a global spirits brand, an education nonprofit.

THE RANGE

Marketing strategy & positioning	Brand, heritage & publications	Company & client communications	Board, investor & donor materials	Creative direction, design & web	Events, campaigns, & launches	Operations, systems & AI	Special projects	Team standards & culture

The fox knows many things. This one does them.

WHEN TO CALL

- The story that should mobilize capital, talent, and clients has no author.
- A substantial initiative has no one to run it.
- The strategic plan names a weakness and the fix has no name beside it.
- Capable people aren't performing at the level the business demands.
- A senior leader left and the work landed on your desk.

> "Val is the person I turn to if we need to accomplish something nebulous, cross-functional or new."
>
> — Crystal Bryant, COO, Synctera

WHAT I TAKE ON

1. The narrative. What the organization says and what you say: to clients and prospects every day, to the board, investors, and press when it counts — in print and in person.[1]
2. The execution. Systems, policies, automation, production, and the discipline of accountability.[2]
3. The standard. How the team shows up: ownership, managing up, presence, and knowing where each person adds value a model can't.[3]

ONE OWNER

AI is my delegate. The judgment, the taste, and the trust stay with me. More ground, higher polish, faster turns: one engagement covers several roles.

[1] A global growth-equity firm: launched its first magazine, 17 interviews and 23 articles across 98 pages — from creative brief to printer in six months.

[2] A publicly traded San Francisco bank: heading marketing, communications, and AI adoption — replacing a passive agency that covered a fraction of the scope.

[3] A spirits brand in its first global year: established an operating rhythm for the CEO's office, from board prep and executive travel to employee policies and a handbook — invited back 18 months later when the CMO left.

THREE WAYS TO ENGAGE

A retainer. A right hand to lead a function or a portfolio of work.

An initiative. Blank page to deadline: a publication, a board cycle, a launch.

A pilot. Clear responsibilities and repeatable practices, built on the team's live projects.

Move forward. Move fast.

val@redfox.run · 203.912.3640 · linkedin.com/in/vcaveney
Sonoma, California